Q: What does the U.S.-CAEF selection process look like?

A: Round 1--The selection process begins following the application deadline. All applications are then reviewed by U.S. admissions experts. Semifinalists are selected based on applications based on demonstrated financial need, academic merit, and two essays regarding the students' financial need and a general statement. The results of the Round 1 will be known in late March.

Round 2--Semifinalists are then given a TOEFL exam and interviewed by American Councils staff and independent business consultants. Only selected semifinalists will be invited for the Round 2 (TOEFL and interview), which will take place in late March- early April. All U.S.-based candidates must take an official TOEFL test in the United States and provide its results, once requested. The results of the second round will be available in May-June.

Round 3--The final selection decisions are made directly by the U.S.-CAEF Board of Directors. American Councils office in Washington D.C. forms the Selection Committee, which provides the Board of Directors with the list of recommended finalists. During the U.S.-CAEF Board of Directors meeting, the final decision is made and the list of finalists is prepared. The final results are usually announced for AUCA applicants in the first half of June, and for the KIMEP University applicants in the second half of July depending on the availability of the admissions decisions of the universities.

Q: Do I need to take entrance exams to AUCA or KIMEP University?

A: All candidates MUST take AUCA or KIMEP entrance exams in order to be accepted at the university; it is a separate process from applying for the U.S.-CAEF program in order to get a scholarship.

In order to be considered for the U.S.-CAEF program, all candidates must be admitted to the selected university with the first (spring) cohort. It is the candidates' responsibility to check the dates of entrance exams and take them on time.

NOTE FOR AUCA APPLICANTS: Please remember that U.S.-CAEF accepts only applicants for AUCA's first admissions cycle which means that all your test scores and application materials must be submitted to AUCA and U.S.-CAEF by that time.
